For actual reserves, see company reports for each mine above. Owning a uranium property requires drilling of uranium resources to obtain the actual in-place uranium mineralization, which then must undergo an assessment of the cost to produce the identified reserves ultimately producing yellowcake.

Once a company produces a report of recoverable product then the project must undergo an independent assessment in the form of a N 43-101 report, or qualified persons report, for the Vancouver, Toronto, Australian and other stock exchanges. For the London Stock Exchange, a Competent Persons Report is required for new mining companies. The U.S. Stock Exchanges require similar independent reports on mining and producing yellowcake and other minerals. For examples of such independent reports, see (here).
